

LA GUIDE

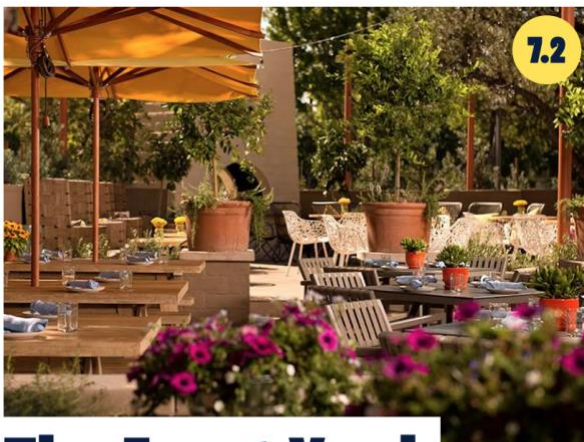

The Best Restaurants In Studio City

The 16 best places to eat in Studio City.

Written by
BRANT COX

Studio City is a quiet and suburban neighborhood in the Valley where a lot of people live because they're sick of forking over half their paycheck to live on the other side of the hill. But that doesn't mean exciting things don't happen here. It takes one quick drive down the main drag of Ventura Blvd. to realize that restaurants are quite literally stacked on top of each other. Whether it's family-run Armenian restaurants, dive-y burger bars, or one of the most impressive collections of sushi spots in the city, there's no reason to be eating poorly in Studio City. Here are 16 spots you should be prioritizing.

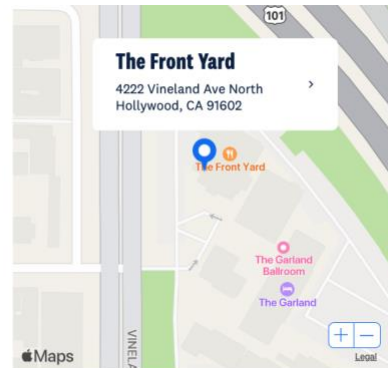

The Front Yard

AMERICAN • STUDIO CITY

VIEW WEBSITE

GET DIRECTIONS

$$$ (818) 255-7290 HOURS: MON 6:30AM-12AM

PERFECT FOR: DAY DRINKING BRUNCH

The Front Yard is the all-day restaurant inside the Garland Hotel that shouldn't be written off as another sleepy lobby cafe. The sprawling courtyard space is one of the Valley's best patios filled with a healthy mix of studio workers sipping wine during their lunch hours and retirees getting day drunk because they can. And on top of all that, the food is solid too. Weekend brunch is the most popular meal here, but cruising up to the bar and ordering the TFY patty melt made with a juicy short rib patty and a gin martini is an ideal midweek lunch in our books.